Granite Properties' mission is to "inspire people to flourish through the spaces [they] create" -- and flourish employees do. Staff rave about the real estate investment company's family-like atmosphere as much as they praise managers' leadership skills. Granite convenes myriad task forces to ensure employees have a say in business decisions, and the CEO gathers employees for regular informal brown bag lunches at all of the company's locations where he learns — and remembers — people's names. Employees say they are paid fairly and have great benefits. Staff work together to improve the community, thanks in part to 40 hours of paid volunteer time and employee committees that decide which philanthropies to support. "Family is a very big part of Granite," one employee says. "You are not just a number here, you matter and you are what makes Granite successful. Granite goes above and beyond in making you feel special."
